Xignite to offer on-demand real-time US Treasury prices from Tullett Prebon Information

SAN MATEO, Calif. June 30, 2008 Xignite, Inc., a leading provider of on-demand web services for mission-critical financial applications, today announced an agreement with Tullett Prebon Information, a leading provider of real-time price information from the wholesale inter-dealer broker financial markets.

The agreement will allow Xignite to deliver Tullett Prebon Information's TreasuryMarker® data covering US Treasury bills, notes and bonds as part of the XigniteMoneyMarkets web service - an on-demand solution allowing firms to integrate global treasury and swap information with their applications in just three lines of code. XigniteMoneyMarkets is used by financial institutions that need accurate and reliable money market information to power their workstations and portals, but want to eliminate the high infrastructure and development costs typically associated with such projects.

TreasuryMarker® is Tullett Prebon Information's flagship product which offers real-time indicative prices and yields for the global government debt markets. TreasuryMarker® is an invaluable pricing source for global government debt. It provides highly accurate prices and yields on the full run of issues for each country.

"Tullett Prebon Information is delighted to partner with Xignite as one of the original pioneers of web services in the financial market data industry. Xignite will help create new opportunities to integrate our data easily into service-oriented applications," said Mike Kirby, Head of the Americas at Tullett Prebon Information.

"We are noticing a progressive shift in the way financial institutions want to receive market data," added Mr. Kirby. "Five years ago, most firms took for granted the fact that market data integration projects were complex and took time. Now, firms are demanding easier and more flexible ways to deliver high-quality market data into their applications."

"Xignite is very pleased to be working with Tullett Prebon Information, considering its worldwide reputation for data quality and its extensive data coverage" said Stephane Dubois, Founder and CEO of Xignite. "Our clients have embraced the ease of integration and zero-infrastructure benefits our web services technology delivers, but they have also requested greater accuracy and increased coverage of specialty data. Our partnership with Tullett Prebon Information will allow us to fill that gap. We look forward to integrating more Tullett Prebon Information data on our platform as demand expands."
